

Role: Research Executive

Location: London (approx. 3 days per week working in office, 2 days per week working at home, dependant on government guidance)

Date advertised: 28th June 2021

The role

ORB International is looking for a Research Executive to join its London research team. The role will primarily involve supporting the delivery of ORB International's ongoing research into global attitudes towards vaccination, and the drivers behind vaccine hesitancy. As a Research Executive, you will be responsible for:

- Supporting senior staff to design the research approach including the drafting of questionnaires and discussion guides.
- Taking charge of the day-to-day management of a number of research projects, including the organisation and management of local interviewing teams and co-ordinating fieldwork across multiple countries and studies.
- Managing and implementing quality control measures on collected data.
- Support senior staff with client management and client-facing presentations.
- Support senior staff with analysis of quantitative and qualitative data, and reporting of results.

This role is an excellent one for someone looking to begin a career in international social research, and build their experience and understanding of research techniques and project management. While these responsibilities will form the main basis of your work initially, as a small company, ORB International encourages staff to take on further responsibilities and projects, and you will be encouraged to develop your skills in your areas of interest.

Requirements

The successful candidate must have:

- A first or upper-second class degree in a social science discipline.
- Strong interpersonal skills.
- Excellent project and time management skills.
- A keen eye for detail.
- Strong SPSS and Excel skills (including writing formulas, lookups and pivot tables).
- The right to work full-time in the UK.
- Previous experience of conducting primary research.

The successful candidate would also ideally have:

- Language skills (French, Arabic are particularly helpful).
- Previous experience conducting international or healthcare research
